Understanding Your Hair Type

Before diving into the OGX hair quiz, it's crucial to understand why knowing your hair type matters. Each individual's hair is unique, influenced by genetics, environmental factors, and personal care habits. Understanding your hair type helps you choose the right products for cleansing, conditioning, and styling. Hair types can be broadly categorized into four main types: straight, wavy, curly, and coily. Each type has its own set of characteristics and requires different care methods.

Identifying Hair Types

Here's a closer look at the different hair types:

- Straight Hair: This type is smooth and shiny, with no natural curl. It tends to be oily, as the natural oils can travel down the hair shaft easily.
- Wavy Hair: Wavy hair has a gentle wave pattern and can range from fine to thick. It often has a combination of oiliness and dryness.
- Curly Hair: Curly hair forms tight loops or spirals and can be quite dry due to the difficulty of oils traveling down the twists.

- Coily Hair: Coily hair has very tight curls, often resembling a zigzag pattern. It is typically the driest hair type and needs extra moisture.

Additionally, understanding the porosity of your hair—how well it absorbs and retains moisture—can further help you select the right products. Low porosity hair resists moisture, while high porosity hair absorbs moisture quickly but may lose it just as fast.
